VIP VISITS

Thomas Stith, III, the new president of the NC Community College System, visited WCC on May 12 to share his vision and learn about the college.

Stith briefed college officials on the "three pillars" of his goals for the system:

- * be the first choice for affordable/accessible education;
- * be the leading entity in North Carolina's economic recovery and going forward with sustained growth, "Wayne Community College in particular;" and
- * be a national model for diversity and inclusion.

Stith heard about the college's numerous recent accolades and how it is meeting the area's workforce and economic development challenges, particularly highlighting apprenticeships and the future Center for Industrial Technology and Engineering. He was given a tour of the college's Nursing Simulation Lab and the Ash Building.

A little more than a month earlier, the college hosted MC Belk Pilon, who is the president and board chair of the John M. Belk Endowment, along with several of the endowment's staff members, and Nation Hahn, director of growth for EducationNC, for a briefing and tour. They heard about the college's growth plans, student success and engagement efforts, and apprenticeships, then visited several areas of the campus.

LATE SPRING 2021

WCC RECOGNIZES EXCELLENCE

Dr. Dean Lawson, a history instructor, was presented the 2021 George E. Wilson Excellence in Teaching Award. Lawson is the 36th recipient of the award that honors Wilson's contributions as a civic leader and WCC trustee. Some of the words Lawson's nominators used to describe him were dedicated, gracious, captivating, and authentic. Watch the video of his surprise presentation.

ApprenticeshipNC awarded Smithfield Foods the 2021 Outstanding Registered Apprenticeship Employer Award, an honor for which WCC nominated the company. The college partners with Smithfield in its apprenticeship programs. Watch a video about those apprenticeships.

President Walker conferred a President's Award for Distinguished Service on Bill Hunter. Watch a video of the presentation. Hunter has served on the Foundation's board of directors for 15 years and, with his company, has generously supported it. He also has given his time and money to civic organizations and his church while running a successful business.
